How do you think Idifarma adds value to clients?

We are a flexible company that knows how to adapt to the needs of the clients and the market. We have a great team of professionals with the technical knowledge to face the challenging projects that are presented to us.

It is important to highlight that we can work with the client from the formulation and analytical development to clinical manufacturing and even the commercialization of the product, including regulatory support if necessary.

But what brings the most value to our clients is the team of professionals we have at Idifarma, always working together with them, offering solutions and ensuring that the projects are successfully completed.

How do you imagine Idifarma in the future?

I would like to see Idifarma as a leading CDMO working on innovative molecules, increasing our production capacity and our technologies to be on the forefront of this challenging market, always with the focus on offering solutions to our client and collaborate to improve patients' lives.

What is the most interesting part of your role at Idifarma?

In this role I have the opportunity to manage activities from clinical development to commercial manufacturing, participating in the definition of the process strategy and new technologies that could be implemented in the company.

It is an exciting job that allows me, together with the great team that works with me and our clients, to improve the lives of patients.

I have a global vision of the company in which I can evaluate in perspective the strategy that our clients and our company need to achieve the objectives.
